

Salmon Wars is a wide-ranging exploration of net cage salmon aquaculture and its social, economic and environmental impact on the communities where it operates. It's an eye-opening 70-minute video documentary that surveys industry representatives, community activists, scientists, environmentalists and politicians, including Nova Scotia's Minister of Fisheries, Aquaculture and Environment. Financed entirely by citizen donations and designed for free distribution, Salmon Wars probes not only our stewardship of the oceans, but also the alliances between industry and government, the ability of local communities to influence their own futures, and the health of democracy in Atlantic Canada.

What you will need:

For home viewings: DVD player and home theatre system (ie. TV and stereo/speakers).

For public viewings: Laptop computer equipped with DVD drive/player, projector and speakers.

Film can also be downloaded for free from www.salmonwars.com but with lower video quality.

What we can provide:

Posters, petitions, Salmon Wars DVD and advertising material including a draft press release and public service announcement.

What we need from you:

Donations: Salmon Wars is funded entirely by individuals who are concerned about the expansion of open net pen finfish farming in Atlantic Canada. We encourage you to ask your audience for donations to help support our continued efforts to spread the word about this documentary. Given the work that is also currently being done in local communities, we invite screening organizers split donations with the local charity of your choice.

Attendance: After the screening, we ask that you provide us with the number of people who attended your screening so that we may keep track of how many people the film has reached

Petitions: We will be sending a number of petitions which ask the NS government for a moratorium on open-net pen aquaculture in the province. We ask that you mail any signed petitions back to us following the screening.
